From the General Manager:

Thank you for picking up a copy of the WRUW Summer Program Guide!

As the sun starts to shine more frequently over Cleveland, the sound of music filling the air will likely accompany it. Be it coming from car windows, front porches, or house parties, music is inescapable at this time of year. What better way to soundtrack your summer than with the eclectic sounds transmitted from WRUW? We've got a brand new schedule put together for you, with nonstop programming all summer long.

Before we continue, we'd like to sincerely thank everyone who donated to our annual telethon in April. It means a tremendous amount to all of us that even in difficult times, there are still significant numbers of people who are willing and able to support non-commercial radio. Aside from the premiums you may have picked out, we will gladly repay you by continuing to provide nothing short of the best non-commercial radio out there.

We are pleased to continue to feature an incredible range of music each week, from beloved indie pop gems to the heaviest of metal tunes, from traditional American folk songs to jazz of all different styles. We have shows that focus on music of different nations spanning the globe, including but not limited to Ireland, Australia, and Italy.

We continue to give back to the community with a number of public affairs shows that address issues that hit close to home. Old favorites like When the Roses Bloom Again, Sunday Matinee, and Chasing Infinity return alongside upstarts like The Tarpit and Pair of Pathetic Peripaletics.

Our long-term digitization project is going along as planned, and we've recently acquired a robot(!) to help expedite the process. Soon enough, our programmers will be able to listen to new music at home, helping to ensure quality programming. We've also started work on our next Studio-A-Rama festival, which will be held this September in the Mather Memorial courtyard on the CWRU campus. While last year's headliners, the legendary Mission of Burma, will be difficult to top, I assure you that we will not disappoint.

Within this insert, you'll find our full summer schedule, sorted out by show time and genre. Find whatever type of music you're into and be sure to tune in to the corresponding shows, and if you're feeling adventurous, seek out something you normally wouldn't listen to. Whether you've been listening for years or you've just discovered WRUW, we'd like to thank you for taking the time to check us out, and for your continuous support.

Happy listening!
Adam Spektor
